Home Is Really Dangerous Place, U.S. Figures Reveal

The need for safety in the home is far greater than a majority of persons realize according to T. D. Bain who is chairman of the home safety campaign which the Marion County chapter of Red Cross opened today in Marion city and county.

According to Mr. Bain more than 34,000 persons were killed and the number permanently disabled by accidents occurring in the home ran into six figures last year throughout the country.

"People do not realize that the home is not safe," he said, "and it is the purpose of this Red Cross program to correct this erroneous belief, to point out common and uncommon home hazards and show how each may be eliminated and to conduct an actual inspection of the home of this community."

The inspection of homes will be carried on by means of inspection forms distributed Friday and Monday to children in all city public and parochial schools and the county schools.

Following are the points which parents are urged to study carefully on the inspection forms, and to make as nearly accurate responses as possible.

Stairways and steps are kept clear, repaired; porches and balconies have secure railings; toys and utensils are properly stored; a step ladder is available in the home.

Safety matches are used, kept out of the reach of children; bonfires are prohibited; fireplaces are properly attended; fireplaces are kept away from small children.

The garage door or windows are kept open when the motor is running; gas appliances are kept in good condition, the gas shut off entirely if equipment is defective until repairs can be made.

Medicines are stored in clearly labeled containers, necessary poisons stored out of the reach of children; food should be removed from the can promptly after opening.

Electric cords and appliances are kept in good condition; touching live conductors of electric current, light fixture and water faucet at the same time is avoided.

Sharp and piercing instruments and broken glass are used carefully or disposed of promptly. Immediate attention is given to all wounds.

Results of the inspection will be published as soon as figures are tabulated.

HIS EXCELLENCY

One of a series of Associated Press sketches telling about the men who occupy the governor's chair in the various states.

GEORGE H. EARLE
THE GOVERNOR OF PENNSYLVANIA

Gov. George H. Earle would rather listen to a discussion of outdoor life than hear some one recall that he was acclaimed a hero of the navy after the World war. He'd rather be recognized as a resident of Haverford than as former minister to Austria.

When he took office last January, the belief that he assumed, either by phrase or circumstance, included ranking the Keystone state's government, steering through a legislative session with a Democratic house and Republican senate, battling utilities and lobbyists, and rewriting the constitution. Despite his numerous labors in the heat of this program, he finds time for recreation. He takes polo ponies between conferences, he manages a daily romp with his dogs, he spends some time every day with his wife and their four boys, and recently he has crowded into his busy routine enough hours in the air to get a student pilot's license.

with relatives, enroute from Chicago, to their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Butler and son Danny, were Sunday guests of U. W. Coburn and family, at Tiro.

Cheer was provided for patients at the Marion City hospital, residents at the Marion County Home and the Walden Ladies' home and the children of the Marion County Detention home, yesterday by a group of Junior Red Cross members.

Every patient and resident was given a "Brownie apple" made by the Junior members of the fourth and sixth grades of the Oak Street school under the direction of Miss Lucile Finner and Miss Alice Stenkenberger.

The apples, which made attractive plate decorations, were decorated by the children from a design developed by Raymond Holme, Marion artist. Painted faces, arms and legs of paper were slipped into slots in the apples and the resulting appearance was of large fat Brownies. The children contributed the apples as an added gesture of service.

Miss Mary Kull, a member of the Red Cross board, delivered the apples in decorated boxes. She was assisted in decorating the boxes by Margery Millan and Wanda Spires of the Oak Street school.

The patients at the hospital also received attractive name cards for their plates.

The Junior members of the Thomas A. Edison Junior High school, the Oak Street, North Main and George Washington schools recently completed 300 Halloween favors which were sent to the veterans' hospital in Dayton. The work was under the direction of Miss Isabelle Unrath, Miss Florence McColl, Miss Philomena Gregg and Miss Margaret Hill.

A "living model" display which will interpret the work of Junior Red Cross boys and girls in foreign lands, will be given by the Marion Junior members on Saturday, Nov. 9 in the office of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

For the next two weeks James Lott of East Church street, Betty

Hogue of North State street and Keith Gibson of Patten street will talk in the interest of the Junior Red Cross at meeting of the Parent-Teacher association, Junior Chamber of Commerce and Rotary club.

DOCTORS KNOW!

There is a remedy for children's biliousness. Mothers, read this.

A constipated child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy.

A liquid laxative is the answer. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

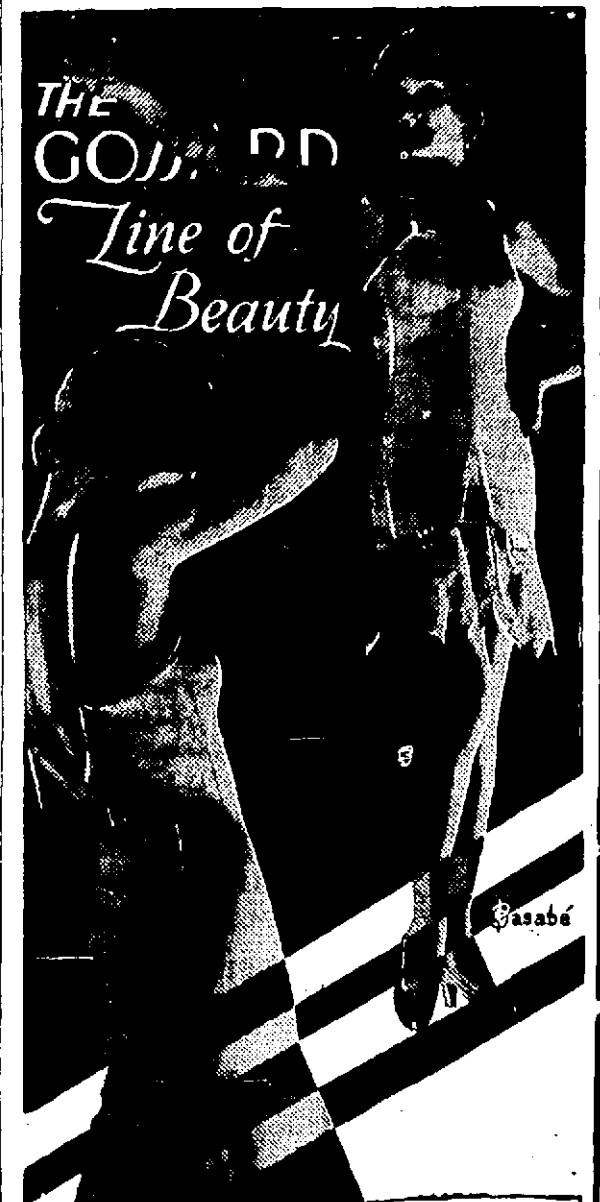

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore, anywhere. It contains pepsin and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit.

Try Syrup Pepsin! It will make you wonder how you could ever get along with any cathartic that disturbs the system, and actually retards your return to regularity.

Auto Accidents Take Lives of 36,000 in U.S. in Year

This is one of a series of interesting facts with representatives of the state industrial commission to be published by The Star in connection with the third annual safety drive to be held in Marion this week.

Automobiles killed 36,000 persons in the United States in 1934, according to traffic fatality records. H. P. Heyne of Canton, safety engineer from the division of safety and hygiene of the state industrial commission, in an interview today as he took part in the final day's program of Marion's third annual safety campaign, said the above statement is incorrect.

"It isn't right to say that automobiles killed 36,000 persons," drivers of automobiles killed 36,000 persons is the correct way to put it," he asserted. "It's a case of people killing people," he said, qualifying the statement, however, by adding that "it isn't always the driver's fault."

Approximately two-thirds of total number of automobile occupants killed last year in traffic mishaps occurred when one or more of the drivers in the accident was driving more than 45 miles an hour, he said.

Cutting in short after passing another car, attempting to pass trucks or other automobiles on hills contributed heavily to the toll, he said.

He quoted survey reports to show

Former Marion Girl Sets Fine Scholastic Record

The unusual scholastic achievements of a former Marion girl at Ohio university have attracted wide attention, according to news dispatches received here.

She is Miss Josephine McVay, 18-year-old daughter of the late H. E. McVay, former superintendent of the Marion city schools, and Mrs. McVay.

Miss McVay is working for her master's degree in French and Latin at the Athens, O. institution, and is a Phi Beta Kappa, a national honorary fraternity whose members have attained a high scholastic average throughout their undergraduate work.

Her educational background in her home is given as a partial reason for Miss McVay's success with her studies. Her father, a well-known Ohio educator, for a number of years was superintendent of the schools here, and acted in the same capacity at Athens for some time. Her great-grandfather, Jacob Lindley, was the first president of Ohio university.

In addition to her scholastic work Miss McVay swims, hikes and is compiling a two-volume book on the news dispatches reported. She was born in Sidney, O., and will not be 19 until March. She lives with her mother in Athens.

Nothing To It

Like a bobcat catapulted into a prayer meeting, Gen. Johnson who leaped into popular attention with the new deal can't be ignored. The general wasn't made to be peaceful. Peace isn't part of his nature.

It has been assumed frequently therefore he had no other motive for scratching and biting than his personal fondness for fighting. Lately another assumption has been more common however.

Gen. Johnson has been acting like a man with presidential ambitions. He has been going about the country attacking the Roosevelt administration and recalling with horror the Hoover administration. Apparently, he has something in mind.

The general has attempted to demonstrate that he has the secret of recovery. The new deal he argues has fallen down because it abandoned its original principles. The thing to do therefore is to return to the original principles.

At one time it seemed Gen. Johnson if he truly had presidential aspirations was thinking of his future in terms of 1940 and thereafter. Recently due to the increasing tempo of his song of scorn, it seems probable he is thinking in terms of 1936, if he really is thinking about being a candidate for president.

It is fascinating to speculate along lines like those which are marked so plainly in Gen. Johnson's case. He is an interesting character. Occasionally he is a valuable character. Always he is a troublesome fellow, whose blurt talk is a head ache to someone. He might do almost anything.

But Gen. Johnson himself has chosen to put a stop to speculation. In an interview at Cleveland this week he denied he had presidential aspirations. There's nothing to it, he declared. I'm for Mr. Roosevelt. For once, the temptation to believe "there's nothing to it" is so strong it's easier to yield to it than to resist it. Henceforth Gen. Johnson shouldn't be considered as presidential timber. He never should have been.

Depending largely on age responses to the National Resources Committee prediction of an era of stability starting about 1960 are etherealistic cold or merely lukewarm. If truly youth will be on the wane in a quarter of a century and age will be in ascendancy, things are bound to be different—but just how different? Who will care? Who will pine for the good old days?

Population expectations indicate that by 1960 there will be twice as many citizens above 60 years of age as now, with the number of youths under 20 fewer by half than the present number. But it must not be forgotten that the youths of today, who may regard with horror the prospect of being on the wane, will be in middle age by 1960. Today's aged moreover who long for a lessening of the pressure put on them by youth will have disappeared.

So it would seem the difference in 1960 and thereafter will be no more perceptible to individuals than the differences which occur in their own lives as they grow older—that is to say, they will scarcely be perceptible at all except by a process of examination too difficult to be attempted in the case of a whole population. It will be a nation growing older and remembering its youth only as memories of youth are awakened by the prodings of reminiscence.

The country in other words will be neither better nor worse in its own opinion by 1960 than it is now. It is interesting of course to know what investigations believe will be true of the population's composition after 25 years. It is furthermore, of some assistance in planning. But the fact it can make no difference to anyone now living except to the young who may be released from the worry of age limits in the jobs they hope to have in 1960 makes the wane of youth and the ascendancy of age distinctly one of the things neither worth worrying about nor cheering about at this time. After all it has been obvious for a century and a half that the United States of America was growing older.

$200 a Month

The Townsend plan convention in Chicago was a great success measured by noise and numbers. Retirement of 8,000,000 persons over 60 years of age on $200 a month seems closer than ever to the hopeful candidates for that fat pension.

Unity in leadership is essential in the mighty effort being made to coerce congress into enacting the Townsend plan. There must be harmony, lest the opposition take advantage of divided opinions. It is best to have one leader, one voice.

The Townsends, consequently have given supreme power to Dr. Francis E. Townsend originator of the plan and to another gentleman R. E. Clements former real estate operator who acts as the doctor's right hand man.

That was the wise thing to do. There will be no dissension in the ranks because both leaders are trusted. Their judgment is held in respect by all Townsends. If anybody can push the Townsend plan through congress Dr. Townsend and Mr. Clements can do it.

Naturally, they cannot carry on the fight without money. Townsends are expected to help the cause along with their contributions. Inconsequential in comparison with the $200 a month they will draw from the government when the Townsend plan becomes law.

There are 3,000,000 Townsend club members. They are expected to pay a dime each month to the national organization. Thousands of them buy the Townsend Weekly owned by Mr. Clements Dr. Townsend and others. There is a considerable business in posters and the paraphernalia of a huge national campaign. Dr. Townsend is in demand for speaking engagements for which he receives remuneration. In other words it looks as though somebody in the Townsend club was getting $200 a month and a great deal more from the thousands who hope to get it some day. There may be something wrong with the Townsend plan but no one can find any holes in the organization which keeps the plan before the public.

The Pinch

Italy is prepared to play the part in role assigned to it by the League of Nations. Economic sanctions will make sacrifices necessary but they will not prevent Italy from proceeding methodically with its invasion of Ethiopia. Sanctions are a difficult but not an insurmountable one.

Theoretically sanctions are supposed to stop war. In the case of Italy for instance embargoes against Italian exports and restrictions on imports are expected to be such severe punishment that the Ethiopian campaign will have to be abandoned. But theory isn't practice.

The economic pinch inflicted by the League of Nations will affect Italy's termination will weaken it. To militate against it will add a source of irritation to the forces which are driving Italy to ward some as yet undefined destiny in the Mediterranean area. Instead of yielding to sanctions Italy will fight them. Their national honor will be at stake.

No over it is well to bear in mind for the sake of accuracy that sanctions can not become effective instantaneously. There is a vast difference between the proposal and the execution of economic punishment. Italy has not suffered yet from the League of Nations decision to inflict punishment on it. When and if Italy is to feel the effect of embargo they will be angry with their persecutors not with their government. It is not impossible that sanctions will strengthen President Mussolini's dictatorial hand. Neither is it impossible that by the time sanctions become serious Italy will have what it wants in Ethiopia.

Undoubtedly all these possibilities and probabilities, with many more have been mulled over by responsible officials in the British and French governments. They are not naive enough to believe they can stop Italy's invasion of Ethiopia with economic sanctions but they could and apparently do feel they can preserve the League of Nations by at least nominal observance of its covenant. European diplomats have a practical reason for everything they do. A fact Americans constantly forget. The reason for sanctions is not to protect Italy but to preserve the League of Nations for use in the future when sanctions on a broader scale might be needed.

Vitality Important

Observers familiar with the technicalities entailed believe the supreme court will give the ruling which is going to settle the issue of the agricultural adjustment act's constitutionality on Jan. 13 the date later than administration officials apparently desired it to be. It is important because it falls after President Roosevelt will have outlined his budget for the next fiscal year.

The budget cannot be prepared satisfactorily until the government's probable income can be estimated. If President Roosevelt repeats his estimates of a few weeks ago however he will include a VA processing tax in the income total despite the fact they have been falling off sharply due to opposition from processors.

Obviously if the supreme court were to decide against the agricultural adjustment act there would be a demoralization of revenue. Loss of processing tax income would emphasize the size of the deficit which reached $1,000,000,000 the first quarter of the year.

President Roosevelt thereupon would have to ask congress for new taxes to provide money for farm benefits. He is committed to continuation of agricultural planning. His strength with agricultural voters depends almost wholly on the government's ability and willingness to pay subsidies to farmers.

It is therefore a vital question as to how farmers would react to an unfavorable supreme court decision in the agricultural adjustment case. Would they rally around President Roosevelt or would they desert him on the ground he doesn't take the proper pains to stay within constitutional limits? The decision promises to transcend in importance both political and economic, the decision in the Schechter case on which the fate of the recovery act depends.

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—Hollywood pumping real money into the dramatic theatrical artery that is the Radio has given an impetus to playwrighting it has not had in years. More than 50 per cent of the plays this season will have the firm backing of studio cash.

No longer does the barred author have to endure the soul trying disquietudes that often attended his efforts to angle a show. Such as staring at a fire or curling with no talent save a lay. Or be subjected to the shilling whims of a temperamental producer.

Hollywood has found real gold in these theatrical experiments in giving quick try outs at comparatively little expense their experts can set a visual and vocal size up that saves them enormous sums in avoiding a production that would be a flop.

Nor does the playwright have to have his opus knocking about in theatrical offices for months and often then never reach a play is taken to them it gets immediate attention and sometimes a decision within a week.

First night enthusiasm sometimes offers curious twists. Plays that may have long runs have frequently been received with cordial but polite restraint. Probably the noisiest premiere the town has ever known was the opening of After especially at that moment when Alice Relyea burst on the stage in nothing particular save a subway smile and two flowing velle singing. Why Don't You. The theater fairly rocked in the longest demonstration ever recorded. The play won no critical flattery or was the star of overwhelming allure. They just happened to catch an audience in an agreeable burst of unexplainable enthusiasm.

Clay Morgan is among recent visitors to Tinseltown to return with what has become known as the I. B. D. report. Interesting but depressing. In Leningrad he found things so contagiously gloomy he could not even laugh at his unfailing cheer retractor—a volume of King Lear and Abel Martin. So he had a dandy cry in his hotel room and skipped the gutter next morning for Paris.

Gen. Funney is becoming more and more the intellectual recluse. For a time he could be invited to this and that and upon occasions might decorate the Rainbow Room. He is now so about the only person able to lure him to small dinner parties is his long time friend Bernard Gimble and he shuns banquets. The undetected champion has jumped out in intensive course of retelling the very crimes of the twenties. He has an office which he visits irregularly to attend to business but most of his time is spent in walking and in his library. He is among the limited circle to carry on a sustained correspondence with George Bernard Shaw exchanging letters every few weeks.

Things are looking up for Jim Hutton's diversion in owning a team of prize hounds. In Hollywood I. B. Hutton Marshall is something of a collector of rare editions. Bill Robinson at 18 runs a half mile backward every morning, before breakfast. The young Boklen King is also a swift backward runner. Eddie who carols the ribald chanter at Leon and I. B. is a devoted fan of the man. Jim Tully's invitation to drink took up a tankard. Harry Salsinger Detroit sports writer suggested Mickey Cochrane to manage the Tigers. Kathleen Norrington state and federal tax of $70,000 is highest among the writing fraternity. Danion Ransome's boyhood name in Pueblo was Al.

Glancing Backward

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Saturday Oct. 31, 1925. Will Rogers in his weekly news letter told of his trip through Ohio and visits to Cleveland and Columbus. He said, "At Columbus the police met me and escorted me to the hotel. I mounted me I think they just wanted to show me their horses and I don't blame them."

Major O. M. Biddinger secretary of the Harding Memorial association returned from a month's visit in the east.

The Quiver carnival was staged at Harding High school by the journalism class with a program featuring Halloween. The carnival netted $165.

Miss Grace Morrison entertained with a Halloween party at the home of her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Likins of North State street.

The City Union of Kings Daughters netted $485 in its annual tag day sale.

Hurdling High school riders defeated Burgin High school at the Fall grounds here 14 to 6. Marion's touchdowns were scored by Cunningham and McElroy and the Burgin touchdown was made by Norris.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Sunday Oct. 31, 1905. Dedication services were held at Fite Memorial Baptist church for a new bell donated by the church by Frank Smith of Cincinnati.

Three mass meetings were held at Marion churches under auspices of the Marion County Dry association marking the close of the campaign against a proposed liquor sale amendment to the state constitution.

More than $1,200 in one of the annual rally day services of Calvary Evangelical church. The bill, when taken together, measured more than 700 feet in length.

Revival meetings were started at Trinity Baptist church with baptismal services. The pastor, Dr. T. H. McAfee spoke on the subject, Christ the King of Heaven at a Closed Door.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—The eminent Dr. Tugwell does not generally speak with authority on the financial aspects of the new deal. Specifically he did not at Los Angeles. If his speech there meant that the profit from gold devaluation is going to be applied to the debt so as to make the budget look better any time soon.

There are good reasons at this end for supposing that the doctor did not intend to say anything new. All he meant to do was to reiterate what Treasury Secretary Morgan has been saying for months. Namely that the deficit will thus be reduced at some time.

Far more authoritative financing sources than he within the new deal believe the proper time will not be reached until money gets tight. They do not see that time coming within a year or two. To use that profit now would add an inflationary aspect at a time when it is not needed and would probably be harmful. The only thing it would accomplish is to give the budget a better political appearance.

Clutch

But here is a better reason than that why it would not be done. The gold profit is the stabilization fund. The treasury cannot afford to use up that fund as long as world currencies are falling about as they are. You may check off Dr. Tugwell's assurance as at least some political and wholly academic.

Guesing

Some men at the controls here are willing to bet even money that Dr. Tugwell will not have a Washington residence when the next campaign starts.

They expect the White House to discover suddenly some day that the economic situation at Geneva or something equally important needs Dr. Tugwell's personal touch for the year 1936. Nothing specific has happened lately to warrant such a conclusion. The Los Angeles speech was not that important.

Nor is the fact that his rural re-settlement program has developed administration difficulties indicating that the doctor's talents for administration work are not equal to his philosophical proficiencies.

Pay Rolls

Behind President Roosevelt's personal poll of business men for ideas to raise the pay roll level is an apparent move to promote a permanent modified NRA.

The government business chat (published yesterday) showed that the pay roll index has increased about 12 1/2 per cent since January while industrial production has shown no increase at all. If an outsider looking at the figures might fall into the error of believing that the manufacturer has raised salaries without increasing production since NRA was abolished.

The fact is one government authority has kept close tabs on wages in specific large industries and has found them relatively unchanged since January. That indicates the demotion of NRA has had no appreciable wage effect in the large industries as represented in the industrial production index (steel, autos, textiles, etc.).

One explanation for the extent of the increase in the pay roll index is that it includes a lot of small factories not included in the industrial production index (small canning factories, textiles, etc.). Business has hit such a jaco that these smaller fellows have extended operations and total pay roll volume since January. Also some of the increase is seasonal but possibly be planned on their payroll expansion.

It still leaves economic room for a new deal promotional campaign to increase wages as the wage index is 74 per cent of normal while production is 91 per cent.

Few insiders here however have any hopes that anything very important can or will come out of the current permanent NRA promotional campaign. It is a good thing to talk about politically a difficult one to act on economically.

Talk

One explanation for the extent of the increase in the pay roll index is that it includes a lot of small factories not included in the industrial production index (small canning factories, textiles, etc.). Business has hit such a jaco that these smaller fellows have extended operations and total pay roll volume since January. Also some of the increase is seasonal but possibly be planned on their payroll expansion.

Most railroad men don't like the idea of cheaper fare medicine a bit. They take no stock in the commission's contention that it will stimulate traffic to the point of profit. They claim that past experience proves very much to the contrary—and cite Minneapolis & St. Louis as a typical victim of an earlier ICC rate reduction brain storm.

Candidates State Plans for Hospital Operation and Smith Reply to Letters from Woman's Board Asking Expression of Attitude.

The Woman's Board of the Marion City hospital, a volunteer group which has made substantial contributions of service and money to the hospital for many years, has asked the two candidates for the position of public expression of their policies with regard to the hospital in their election next Tuesday.

In reply to the requests, the two candidates have prepared replies and turned them over to The Star to inform the general public of their views regarding hospital finance and administration.

The Woman's Board, through its corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. L. Brady, has sent letters to the two candidates, a copy of which, together with the candidates' replies, appear below.

The Woman's Board, through its corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. L. Brady, has sent letters to the two candidates, a copy of which, together with the candidates' replies, appear below.

Mr. Hill's Answer

In reply to your letter of Oct. 20, I wish to thank you for the opportunity to express myself in regard to the Marion City hospital.

As a member of the medical profession I am and have always been primarily concerned with the advancement of the science and art of medicine. This, I believe, I have demonstrated in a small way in my own institution. The care of the sick and the relief of suffering have been my life's work. Should I be elected mayor and the welfare of the City hospital become my responsibility, I could not as a man and a physician do other than promote the best interests of that institution to the best of my ability. I believe that my experience and knowledge as a physician and in the conduct of my own hospital give me a particular understanding of the problems incident to hospital administration, service and financing.

I wish to assure you as members of the hospital board that it shall be my very great pleasure, in the event of my election, to cooperate with your board and with the medical profession, to maintain and to advance if possible the present high type of service, as well as to improve the financial standing of our municipal hospital.

Very truly yours,
Frederick C. Smith, M. D.

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman

Suddenly Anne remembered the letter from Judge Kellogg. He said there had been something in the will concerning the fish traps. Surely, with Luke's views on the subject, it would have been an order to give the fishermen preference.

"John," she said, "tell them to rest easy. Don't you see, Rob, thought he was going to control things for me and that was what gave him the authority he used on that trip. Since then he has learned Uncle Lee is in charge, and Uncle Lee is working under written orders left by father, by Luke."

"You hope you're right, because—" "You mean you're afraid of trouble between the fishermen and Tom and Rob and Uncle Lee?" She felt John was hiding the real cause of the disturbance.

"Yes, I am," he answered, "and I wish it would either happen before I leave for Alaska, or hold up until I return. The fishermen will be the ones to suffer because they have no legal right to interfere."

"Then you don't believe they will obey the instructions Luke left?" John looked down at her. "Knowing them, Nikki, I'm afraid that unless there is a penalty attached to their defying these instructions, they'll ignore them. Lee will be willing to take the word of the other two men and—" he shrugged his shoulders and tossed his hands out, palms up.

"I wonder," mused Anne softly, "I wonder if Luke anticipated trouble with Rob Crocker, before his death?"

"I've wondered that too. Well, I must hurry or that brother of mine will fire me. I hope I'll see you this evening, but tomorrow I'll be over to help with the house."

"That's nice of you," Anne answered, wishing he would tell her more of conditions among the fishermen. Then she looked up at him and smiled. "Only, I'm afraid I'm learning to depend upon you too much, John."

John, who had started down the steps, paused and looked back. "Not too much to please me, Nikki," he retorted. "I wish... but if wishes were fishes—"

"Rob and Tom would invent a new kind of fishtrap to beat us out of them," she chuckled, and was glad to learn she could laugh at the men who had caused her so much heartache. The laugh served a second purpose. It covered the confusion his words had brought her.

She stood awhile, looking down at the tall figure in sweater and high boots sliding down the street; stood until the figure had crossed the highway, walked down the wharves and disappeared over the side.

Anne spent the morning writing to Judge Kellogg. She asked him a signed blank check asking him to withdraw the money from her home bank and deposit in another under the name of Nikki Nielsen, enclosing the new signature. She told him in detail of her plans, then asked him to please try to review the will, especially that part dealing with cannery operations. Luke returned from town soon after lunch with samples of everything from wall paper to roof paint and Anne, surprised at her sudden interest, forgot the past for several blissful hours.

Together they went to the old house, opened the door with their own key and looked upon it with possessive eyes. This they would do, and this. The big room would be papered in buff to brighten the many grey days. The windows would be curtained in dull plaid crash. The kitchen would be done in yellow and black. Anne chose pale rose and silver for her room and Lilias, after changing her mind 20 times, decided upon a paper that carried the entire solar spectrum.

"With plain green net window curtains, though, I'll probably feel like a fish in a sea."

But cleaning came first, to make way for the house-raising next day. This was a new experience to Anne, and by sundown she discovered an amazing number of muscled she hadn't realized she possessed.

"The bath will steam out the aches," Lilias prophesied as they made ready to go to the Finnish bath house, each with a basket containing feather soft towels, soap, powder and fresh clothing.

Arm in arm they started down the twilight smothered street. To Anne, who had stayed close by the house since her arrival, there was a feeling of adventure in going even to Union Town. There was little danger of meeting anyone she knew, or of anyone recognizing the curly haired girl in one of Lilias's old coats, and yet the rush of cars along the highway which cut through the business section confused her.

She drew back into the shelter of Lilias's shadow as a couple pulled up close to the curb, laughed at her thought that the car was Rob's, then set her lips in a straight-line to hold the cry that rushed to them.

The car was Rob's, and seated beside him, her face clearly revealed by the match Rob was holding for her cigarette, was Sharlee Farnsworth.

The match went out. Sharlee snuggled into the curve of Rob's arm and they drove away. And Anne, still silent, followed Teela, Alina and Lilias into the steam baths.

Anne had heard of Finnish baths. She knew there were steam rooms where one sat upon wooden benches, while icy water played upon hot rocks until the room was smothered in steam, and scented with the aroma of cedar boughs, followed by steam and water to brush like fire.

At Teela's insistence she sat on the lowest tier where the steam, to which she was unaccustomed, would not suffice her. But she was stifled. Sharlee in Rob Crocker's car; in Rob Crocker's arms? What did it mean?

Anne experienced a Finnish house-raising tomorrow, for the first time.

AGED MAN CLEARED OF MURDER CHARGE

Davis last night in the presence of Police Chief William E. Marks and Captain E. C. Mackan, was quoted as corroborating Watkins' story.

Accused of Murder in Robbery Act

Police Chief Marks, who signed the first degree murder affidavit against the slain man's brother a few days after the murder on the strength of what then appeared to be definite evidence of guilt, yesterday filed first degree murder charges against Watkins and Braden. They are charged with murder while attempting to perpetrate a robbery.

Authorities this morning were uncertain about what conviction of the two accused men would mean to the aged brother who has been in the state hospital for the criminally insane since January of 1932. It was the consensus of officers that his position will not be changed until after the grand jury acts on the cases of Watkins and Braden and final disposition made of them in common pleas court.

In view of the fact that Bennett was held by the superintendent of the state hospital to be insane and not possessed of faculties to have an ethical conception of right and wrong, authorities indicated their first step will be to determine his present mental condition. In the event of conviction of Watkins and Braden, it is expected he will be transferred to another state institution for mental cases other than criminal insanity, provided there is no improvement in his mental condition. Possibility that Bennett might be given complete freedom in the event of an improvement in his mental condition also was discussed.

Early Complications Develop in Case

An unusual set of circumstances contributed to the commitment of the aged man to the state hospital following his indictment by a Marion county grand jury on a charge of first degree murder in January of 1932. Factors included a confession given authorities by Bennett that he "fired a shot" at his brother on the morning that time to have been used in the murder in the possession of a relative of Bennett's. Bennett, in his confession, told authorities he had been quarreling with his brother for months over division of household expenses at the home they shared at 680 Bennett street. He broke down several times during questioning and the court procedure that followed. When he later denied the shooting, the question of his sanity was raised and before a trial date could be set, arrangements were made to send him to the state hospital for the criminally insane for observation. Subsequently he was committed permanently to that institution.

Although the source of the original suggestion that resulted in Watkins and Braden's plan to rob James Franklin Bennett, on the morning of Dec. 12, 1931, is not completely explained in confessions from them, their stories agreed, officers said, on the fact that Braden borrowed a gun from an acquaintance the day before the murder. On the theory that Bennett would be carrying an amount of money that might total $200 or more, the holdup was planned at Braden's residence next door to the Bennett home.

After the attempted robbery and shooting, the two men said they fled, empty handed, not realizing that Bennett had been killed. They said, according to their confessions, they took a roundabout route away from the place of the shooting at 680 Bennett street, got into an old automobile parked in an alley, and went back to Braden's residence.

Discovery Wound

Watkins said he did not realize until several hours after the shooting that one of Bennett's bullets had struck him. He said he discovered it when he felt something rough in the bottom of his shoe. Investigating, he said he found it was a 22 caliber bullet and discovered that the bullet had pierced the flesh of his leg at the ankle. He was quoted by police as saying that he did not go to a doctor, but treated his wound with mercuric chrome obtained from an acquaintance. Capt. DeWeese reported that a checkup with the acquaintance mentioned by Watkins verified his statement.

Change of Mind

Watkins was quoted as saying in his confession to DeWeese that about six months after the fatal shooting he had considered giving himself up to authorities. He did not say what caused him to abandon this plan.

One of the most challenging developments in the investigation that led to the arrest of Watkins and Braden was the fact that no gun was found on the slain man, although he was said by Watkins to have fired several shots. Also difficult to explain was the fact that a 22 caliber revolver, from which shots had been fired, was traced to the dead man's brother, who admitted taking all shells out of it the day following the murder and sending the gun out of town with a relative. It later was recovered by police, and seemed to link Cyre Bennett to the shooting, especially after he had told police he fired a shot at his brother.

Summary by DeWeese

Capt. DeWeese, with several other officers concurring, pieces the happenings together something like this: The slain man had purchased a 22 caliber revolver about a month before the murder. Part of the time, the gun had been lying around the house the brothers shared, and for that reason Cyre Bennett became a suspect early in the case after it was learned that a 22 caliber bullet fired by him was found lying on the sidewalk near his home. Authorities are inclined to believe one version of the happenings told by Cyre Bennett. He said he became alarmed at his brother's failure to return home about 3 a. m. on the morning of the murder and left the house to look for him. He Cyre Bennett said he found his brother lying across the sidewalk near the house. He said he returned to the house and returned members of the family and went out again. He told police at that time he picked up a revolver, lying in the mud, and took it into the house. If this explanation of the happenings is correct, it rounds out the story of the murder. Watkins and Braden were reported to have told.

For Cyre Bennett's "confession" that he fired a shot at his brother in the commission of a quarrel over sharing household expenses, officers could only advance the theory that he might have been suffering from mental trouble. During the course of repeated questionings about the murder, he came to believe that he might have fired the shot.

Watkins, when first taken into custody Monday night for questioning, denied any knowledge of the murder. When Capt. DeWeese pointed out the bullet wound in his leg, Watkins averred as having fired first shot he was shot accidentally when, the age of 33, he was playing with a boy by the name of Moore near Laflus where he formerly lived. Asked where Moore is now, Watkins was "stiff" as saying, "Oh, he's dead."

Further questioning Tuesday night, he was reported to have made a complete confession. Braden, in his statements to authorities, said he joined members of the Bennett family in the excitement that followed discovery of the slain man's body, and first learned at that time that Bennett was dead. Watkins was quoted as saying he did not learn until the next day that Bennett had died. He was living on Trus avenue at that time, and went to his home shortly after the shooting.

Watkins, police said, has a criminal record. They said records show he served two years in the Ohio penitentiary on a grand larceny charge in connection with theft of a large amount of liquor from a residence in Lima several years ago. Braden, police said, has been involved in several petty crimes, including a chicken theft here.

Watkins told authorities he was in a work shop the evening of the murder. Braden is a carpenter. He has an eight-year-old son, officers said.

When Capt. Ora DeWeese began his first verified version of the case, he first verified enough of the information he had received to convince him that Watkins and Braden were involved in the fatal shooting. In possession of this information, he went to prosecuting Attorney Paul D. Michel Sunday and asked if he should "go ahead."

The prosecutor, after studying the case with him, advised him to continue his checkup and Monday night the certain had Patreline Norton and Underhill arrest Watkins and Braden.

It was expected today that a special session of the grand jury will be called within a week or 10 days to take action on the cases of Watkins and Braden. It is expected by the grand jury the accused men will be arraigned in common pleas court. The court will dispose of their cases if they plead guilty at that time or set trial dates for them if they plead not guilty.

Gun Left With Police For Safe-Keeping

Through an odd set of circumstances, the gun with which Othol Watkins, 45, of Barnhart street admittedly shot James Franklin Bennett on the morning of Dec. 12, 1931, has been in possession of police for safe-keeping since July 30, 1932.

Watkins' use of the gun in the fatal shooting has been known to police only since Tuesday night. Police obtained the gun from the wife of the man who allegedly counted when Bennett's gold watch and some change were found in his clothing after the body had been taken to an undertaker. The fatal bullet, not located at first, was found in Bennett's clothing where it had lodged after piercing his body.

Mrs. James Roush, a daughter of Bennett, put police on one possible trail of the murderer when she told them her father had been worried several years previously when a man with whom he had worked in a section gang for the Big Four railroad had made threats to him. Police brought in the man referred to, but questioning him convinced them he was not involved in the case. He was released.

Bennett was killed by a bullet from a 22 rifle or pistol. Discovery that Cyre Bennett had reported finding a 22 revolver near the scene of the shooting and a checkup on the ownership of the pistol was one of the first developments that led authorities to suspect the brother as the possible murderer.

Probing this development, police learned the gun had been purchased by the slain man about a month before the murder, and had been lying around the house. Members of the family recalled it had been picked up for a time on the plane in the Bennett home. Questioning of Cyre Bennett disclosed, police said, that he had taken the shells out of the gun and dumped them into a drawer the day following the murder. Later the gun had been sent away from the house with a relative, but was returned at the request of police.

On the second day following the murder, police started questioning Cyre Bennett and later reported he had admitted "firing at" his brother about the time of the murder. They quoted him as saying he and his brother had quarreled for months over the division of household expenses and that their differences finally led to a moment of rage in which he took the gun, left the house at about the time he knew his brother would be coming home and shot at him as he came home, the sidewalk near the Bennett residence.

The only major discrepancy noted at that time was Bennett's declaration that he fired only once whereas neighbors were quoted as having reported four or five shots were heard. On other points, however, the account he told them apparently tallied with the meager facts they were able to obtain.

Bennett, in making his statement to police, was quoted as having said he "couldn't hold it any longer," and officers said he appeared nervous and confused. However, he appeared to be in weakened condition, and was scarcely able to walk when taken into municipal court for arraignment.

When asked for a plea, Bennett asserted he never would acknowledge killing his brother. He asked for an attorney and then almost collapsed. Judge William R. Martin delayed the taking of a plea for 24 hours and in the meantime arrangements were made to provide Bennett with legal counsel.

On the following day, Dec. 18, the law firm of Dowd & Davis entered a plea of not guilty for the aged man, then in the county jail. He was bound over to the grand jury without bond. The grand jury, on Jan. 12, 1932, indicted Bennett on a charge of first degree murder and two days later the accused man entered a plea of not guilty to the indictment. At this time, he changed his entire story.

He declared he never fired a shot at his brother, and asserted he was in bed at the time his brother was killed.

Four days later, while Bennett remained in jail waiting for a trial date to be set, the late Judge George B. Scottfield ordered Bennett committed to the state hospital in Lima for observation. A month later, Dr. W. V. Young, superintendent of the state hospital, reported to Judge Scottfield that Bennett was not sane and did not have an ethical conception of right and wrong. He recommended that Bennett be committed to that institution permanently and the recommendation was followed.

DAYTON PLANE CRASH UNDER INVESTIGATION

Yakima, Wash., and Leslie Tower, chief test pilot of the Boeing company, Seattle, builders of the plane, were in "serious" condition at a hospital here.

The two were the first dragged from the wreckage by Lieut. R. K. Giovannoli and L. P. Harman, who, standing on the field, beat ambulances to the scene and defying the flames, pulled the men to safety. John Cutting, 28, field test observer, and Mark M. Koogler, 28, field employee, other passengers aboard the plane, suffered relatively minor burns.

Meanwhile, Lieut. Giovannoli, from Lexington, Ky., and Harman, from Boise, Idaho, heard themselves praised by Col. Fred L. Martin, field commander, for their "fine and nerve" deed.

Dead Miraculous "I don't see how they did it," Martin declared. "They disregarded terrific heat, and the fact that there were numerous tanks of gasoline aboard the plane. They just dove in, broke open the nose and hauled the men out."

"No," Martin replied to a question. "They didn't have much to say about it. They're getting along splendidly, I'm glad to say, and will be out of the hospital shortly."

Martin said he "understood" the Boeing company, builders and owners of the "flying fortress," were protected against loss only to the extent of the actual cost of the ship, which was valued at $500,000.

This figure, however, from other official sources, was disclosed as including engineering costs and other details of construction beyond materials.

Slater ships were offered to the army at $100,250 each, in lots of 25, or $100,020 for an order of 225 craft.

For maintenance work on school buildings, the board of education has been obliged to rely entirely in recent years on the federal government's "reconstruction" program through which much painting and some repair work has been accomplished.

Salaries Below Average Super. Hudson, in another article in this series, already has emphasized that teachers' salaries in Marion are considerably below the average for cities of this size, and that teachers are continuing to work under 25 per cent pay cuts since in effect in 1932-33.

"Everything possible" is being done to hold school expense to a minimum, such as keeping salaries at the lowest possible figure and "holding down maintenance costs," he said. "Some people might suggest that such sources as manual arts and domestic science be discontinued as an economy move, but we would have to provide some other courses in their places, and consequently no savings could be made that way."

He emphasized that even while the three-mill levy has been yielding approximately $9,000 annually to help pay school operating costs these economies have been necessary.

It should be readily apparent to anyone, he concluded, that withdrawal of this source of revenue would cut down school revenue to a point where it would be impossible to carry on a satisfactory educational program.

be a strong tendency to spend as much in (the fiscal year) 1937 as in 1936.

Doubt that emergency expenditures would decrease next year also was expressed by Rep. Bolton of Ohio, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee. "I hope they do," Bolton said, "but I understand the administration is planning for new large emergency expenditures in the next budget."

Administration spokesmen say that the curtailment of emergency expenditures depends upon absorption of the unemployed by private industry. They agree that some of the relief spending will have to continue for years, but contend the treasury can stand that in view of expected increases in revenue.

Federal relief officials are not optimistic over the possibility of cutting relief rolls down sharply. They say most of the new jobs opening up in private industry are going to those who are not on the relief rolls; that the unemployed who lost their jobs last, and are not yet on relief, are being taken back first.

On the other hand, Leader Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, argues that the great bulk of the jobs will be gradually absorbed and that there will be no permanent army of unemployed.

Lubin concedes it may be several years before they get back on private payrolls, and that even then it may be necessary for the government to permanently increase health, educational, and recreational functions to absorb the balance.

Bolton contended that current funds were beginning projects which would compel huge additional appropriations in the future. Thereby "putting around our necks a tremendous burden to complete."

WATSON SUCCEEDS C. C. STILLMAN TODAY

Shift in Relief Leadership Comes as U. S. Allots $42,992.861 More to State.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 31.—C. C. Stillman began his last day as Ohio's welfare administration chief today following an announcement that the federal government had allotted the state $42,992.861 for additional WPA projects.

Stillman turns his desk over to Dr. Carl Watson of Findlay tonight and returns to his old post as chairman of the department of social administration at Ohio State University.

Dr. Watson, a retired surgeon and former chairman of the Democratic state executive committee, comes in to a job that has been a storm center for months. Beginning as the post of federal emergency relief administrator for Ohio, it has developed into WPA administrator through the gradual supplanting of the FERA by the WPA.

Stillman, a scholarly native of Troy, N. Y., stepped into the job March 17, when FERA Chief Harry Hopkins informed President Roosevelt he had "inconceivable evidence" that Gov. Davey's campaign committee had engaged in a shake-down of concerns dealing with the state relief administration.

Stillman leaves for Watson the assignment of putting the 213,200 persons eligible for WPA jobs to work before the snow flies.

Although the federal government hopes to withdraw completely from direct relief by Nov. 15, Watson probably will have to care for 200,000 families after Nov. 1 and possibly until Dec. 1.

To the Voters Of Marion and Marion Township:

I have been serving you as Marion's First Municipal Judge. This honor was bestowed upon me by the voters of Marion and Marion Township and in accordance with their directions I inaugurated the Court. You have watched its growth from its adoption to its present standing as one of the corner stones of our local government. At first it was untried and experimental; it is now a necessary and vital unit of local justice and law enforcement.

Thousands of cases have been presented to me which have covered all branches of litigation. For your information, and which are matters of record, I wish to call your attention to the fact that although Judge of one of the lower courts of the State, nevertheless I have rendered several decisions on which the law in Ohio had never been decided. These decisions were later affirmed by the Supreme Court of this State and thus became the laws of our State.

Furthermore, the Court has not only the taxpayers of this community a single cent in taxation. It has been operated at the lowest possible cost and at the same time maintained an efficient government by the Municipal Court in the State of Ohio. In addition to being a necessary part of the Court, the Court has also the different governmental subdivisions. The Court has been in existence since January 1, 1935, the sum of $25,000.00.

If you feel that the Court is not doing its duty, please write to me and I will be glad to hear from you.

W. Kenneth Tobin, Municipal Judge.

Dopesters Say State Will Win; Schmidt Not So Sure

D. S. U. COACH MOANS AS REGULARS DRILL AGAINST FRESHMEN

Twenty-Four Special Trains To Carry Throng to Columbus Saturday

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 31.—There is a football game here Saturday—in case you didn't know.

The evidence? Coach Francis A. Schmidt watching the freshman squad complete forward passes against the highly touted Ohio State regulars. You guys will have to do better than that for them, Notre Dames are better than our freshmen.

And what the secret practice was over he moaned again. Were his, such a tough time trying to dope out a way to stop Notre Dame that we can't find time to practice our own offense.

Further the railroads reported happily that at least 24 special trains will bring almost 10,000 football fans from everywhere. That doesn't count the extra cars. The Pennsylvania has scheduled ten special trains to New York Central plus the Chesapeake & Ohio four and the Norfolk & Western one.

Now, the dopesters talk about Ohio State by a pair of tough downs or more in this alleged football battle of the century. Pulling Coach Schmidt's moulin full bear they cry:

1—The Irish showed their hand against Pittsburgh under the eyes of Buckeye scouts. The Bucks—You ain't seen nothing yet.

2—Jumping Joe Williams flying feet will offset Bill Shakes' punting phenominal punting.

3—Ohio has the deciding factor of reserves—big men who can go in there fresh and fighting.

Ernie may the dopesters. Notre Dame two touchdowns Ohio State four or more. Slow slippery when wet. Proceed at your own risk. Don't bet your rent.

Just to know you who cares about it all.

Joseph Smith, 74-year-old Notre Dame grad living in Circleville, O., will wear with the other 80,000 if he drops a cold between now and Saturday. He bought his ticket early.

On the other side of the stadium will be the sole remaining member of Ohio State's first graduating class '78. That's John F. Madden of Steubenville. He's 70 and thinks Mr. Schmidt is a sophomore.

Then the city of Columbus is taking a practical view of the matter. All hotel rooms are reserved. Street cars and taxis will be crowded. Urchins living around the campus will reap a fine harvest for parking your car.

And 100 policemen will keep an eye on everybody.

BUCKEYES CLASH WITH NOTRE DAME IN YEAR'S BIG GAME

JOE WILLIAMS Ohio State
FRED CARDELO Notre Dame
WAYNE MILLNER Notre Dame
GOMER JONES Ohio State

One of 1935's most momentous football struggles is anticipated in the clash between Ohio State and Notre Dame at Columbus Saturday. Expected to attract nearly 90,000 spectators, experts predict the winner will go on to a national championship. There are some of the stars who will perform. Millner is considered one of the best ends in the game and Cardele is listed as an outstanding Notre Dame back. Will Williams, Ohio State's phenominal sensation and Jones, who captained the Buckeyes at center are two of the six of the Big Ten team. (Associated Press Photo) was so poor generally that Coach Bernie Bierman sent his players jogging around the field as a penalty for misplays.

gave Yale and Princeton hard battles before losing. If Michigan can defeat the Quakers it will be a greater matter of worry than yet to Minnesota and Ohio State which must play Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Forward pass defense and drilling on old fundamentals occupied Big Ten teams today as they hunted through final hard workouts for Saturday's games. Purdue and Minnesota labored long for their important duel at Minneapolis. Purdue worked on new plays and Coach Noble Kizer planned the use of two alternating backfields to speed up the offense. Minnesota drilled on passes but the receiving

Michigan Showing Causes Worry in Big Ten Camps

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—While Ohio State and Minnesota are supplying headline news for the football pages the Big Ten Coaches and Buckeyes included in worrying in silence over a familiar but puzzling menace—Michigan.

The Wolverines are punting, passing, and prying again. When Michigan State liked the Wolves 25 to 0 on the opening day of the season Oct. 6 the Big Ten relaxed from that old source of worry and contented its attention on the Buckeyes and others.

Coachmen who didn't have Ohio State and Minnesota on their ached ulcers exchanged congratulations. But the worry is back operating from the old Maize and Blue stand snapping back after the Michigan State collapse. The Wolverines played smart defensive football to pick the big Indiana bubble 7 to 0. They caught Wisconsin on the rebound and licked the Badgers 20 to 12 by snatching the breaks at Madison. Last week playing their point game and prayer formation to perfection they invaded and beat Columbia 19 to 7. Nothing was so impressive in these victories but the schedule and comeback drive is typical of those that have found Michigan as a mighty team when the season neared the finish line.

Every great Michigan team of modern day football has had a non-national success. Coach Thayer Kirtland calls Bill Henner a greater player than either Heilel or Huhn or Harry Newman a surprising statement in view of Michigan's disastrous start this fall.

Pennsylvania will invade Michigan Saturday to play the Maize and Blue and will test before it is known Big Ten warfare Penn whipped Columbia 11 to 0 and

Wooster Hopes To Spoil Muskingum's Homecoming Celebration

By The Associated Press
WOOSTER, Ohio, Oct. 31.—Muskingum's homecoming celebration was dimmed slightly today when Coach L. C. Bales revealed that three of the Scots probably would not start the game.

Bus Finckel, fullback, Art Collier, quarterback, and Lee Driven, star guard, is injured in the Mount Union game last week. Probably will remain on the bench, Bales said.

Muskingum is not on average the 24-20 defeat administered by Wooster last fall.

There was bad news at Athens today as the result of the loss of Clark, Rich, and H. H. withdrew from school and went to his home in Canton suffering from an ailment over which Athens physicians puzzled for some time. The Bobcats meet their ancient rival Miami this week.

Ohio Northern preparing for an encounter with Detroit Tech went through turning and tackling plays yesterday. Alf Robinson, halfback, returned to the squad but is unlikely to start the game.

LAYDEN WORKS ON LINEUP; MAY USE PITT GAME STARTERS

Rockne Successor Will Debut on Straight Football To Grab Victory.

By The Associated Press
SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 31.—The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame will start one of possibly two Irishmen in their football game against Ohio State Saturday.

Jim Martin, right guard, is the one proud son of Erin virtually sure to be in the starting lineup. The second, a possibility because of early season injuries may keep him out is Mike Layden, right halfback and brother of the Notre Dame coach, Elmer Layden.

Layden who learned his football under the late Knute Rockne and starred as a member of the great Four Horsemen plans to use straight football against the Buckeye powerhouse. It is strange but true that the Irish haven't been given more than a half dozen new plays all season.

I haven't seen a team yet that couldn't be beaten with well polished fundamentals," he said.

School Grid Teams of District Face Hard Battles This Week

With district teams entering the final quarter of play in the 1935 football season many interesting battles are scheduled for this week.

Six district teams will see action Friday afternoon. One of the interesting battles on schedule for that day is the LaRue-Pickwood contest to be played on the Richmond field. Always friendly rivals the teams will be playing hard to gain a victory. LaRue last week was held to a 6-6 tie when they performed at home against Forest. They previously defeated Forest in the latter's homecoming game 13 to 8.

Marysville last week trampled over Delaware to score a 19 to 0 victory. This week the Marysville squad journeys to Circle Hill in search of another victory.

Mt. Pleasant is undefeated in the Mid State league is tied for top honors with Madison neither team having been defeated in conference play. Last week Mt. Pleasant won their fourth consecutive league victory by defeating Danville 33 to 13. This week they will meet Ashley in a non-league contest away from home.

Carey will meet Crestline in a Friday battle this week. Last week the Carey High team left before the strong Tiffin Calvert squad 40 to 0.

Only one district game is to be played Saturday. Forest High team will play at Upper Sandusky in a game which promises to give fans plenty of action.
